LIBERIA PROJECT NOT ABANDONED

COLORED COLONIZATION PLANS WILL BE CARRIED OUT AS HAS BEEN ANNOUNCED SAY PROMOTORS

BULLETIN

An agreement of trust between Frank Chamberlain and the Liberia Land and Development Co., whereby Mr. Chamberlain transferred to company mentioned 445 acres, was filed in the recorder's office at Joliet Tuesday afternoon. A trust deed in the sum of $65,000 covering the property was also filed. Homer Kemp, Geo. J. Harberer and Geo. Holle are named trustees for the Liberia Land and Development Co.

Geo. Holle and Andrew J. Lane, members of the Liberia Land and Development Company, emphatically denied that their project for colonization in New Lenox township had been abandoned as was reported in certain circles last week, when they were in Mokena Sunday.

Both men stated that the deal is going over, contrary to reports not withstanding and that their plans will be carried out in full. They in company with a large number of colored people were out Sunday looking over the lots on the Chamberlain farm and four lots were sold on that day.

Mr. Lane stated that the company had plenty money back of it and is well able to finance their project which is going to go over big. He said that this is no day dream, but a reality.

Mr. Lane further said that no residence plan of $3,000 will be permitted to be erected in the residence section of Liberia and that no business place can be built costing less than $5,000 which will mean that Liberia will be a very valuable property and will mean a great deal when it comes to taxation and will greatly increase the wealth of Will County.

After a certain number of business places have been established the owners will be asked to vote on a site for the New Rock Island depot in Liberia.

Much activity is promised to be going on in the proposed Liberia site within the next few weeks. It is planned to have at least 20 residences under construction this fall and winter. Blue prints of the subdivision have been prepared and completed.

Both Mr. Holle and Mr. Lane stated Sunday that were their project abandoned they would not be coming here and bringing people out to buy lots as they are doing. Further interesting developments are to be announced soon. Watch the News-Bulletin for further particulars relative to the development of Liberia.

Judge Drew Will Speak at Mokena Fri. Night

Mokena is going to be given the opportunity of hearing one of the best entertainments that have ever been held here, on Friday night of this week when an exceptionally meritorious program will be given at the Mokena M. E. church.

The headliner for the evening will be Judge S. J. Drew of the Will County Probate Court. This is not a political meeting at all and politics will not enter the program. Judge Drew is known all over the county and will have a message that will be well worth hearing. He will have a vital message and will leave many points of interest with you.

In addition to the address by Judge Drew there will be a musical program, consisting of vocal and instrumental numbers which will be wholly out of the ordinary.

Everybody is invited to this event.

WISE BIRDS KICK UP ROW; ARE JAILED

Excitement ran high in Mokena Saturday night when the news was spread that 23 toughs from Joliet were at the Men's Club picnic at the Cappel Grove and were threatening to "clean up" the place.

Deputy Sheriff Geo. Aschenbrenner notified Deputies John Frisch and Walter Fisher to assist him in keeping peace at the dance. When the three officers arrived they found a young fellow engaged in an argument. Deputy Frisch found a others of their bunch arguing at the ticket window and when he asked him what the trouble was the youth replied "Who the h—l are you?" and started getting chesty. He attempted to make a pass at the deputy, but the latter was too quick and struck the youth a stunning blow on the head with a back jack, the blow knocking him senseless. He was cut and started bleeding. Dr. McMahn was called and dressed his wounds following which he and three of his companions were placed under arrest and taken to the village jail in Mokena. Mr. Fisher said he knew the boys and said he would be responsible for their appearance for trial, so Deputy Frisch released them for the night. They came back Sunday morning and were given a hearing before Justice John F. Schultz who continued the case until Sunday afternoon.

The case was called at one o'clock. The testimony of Deputy Frisch showed that the four lads had been disorderly at the grove. He had sworn out warrants charging all four with being disorderly, drunk and resisting an officer.

The defendants gave their names as John Baros, Tom Kazma, Frank Haffner and Tom Filch. They denied the testimony of the officer which angered Deputy Frisch who recommended that Justice Schultz inflict a heavy fine on Baros and Haffner and pleaded for leniency for Kazma and Filch.

Justice Schultz assessed a fine of $15 against Baros who had been knocked down by Deputy Frisch at the time of the fracas at the grove. In addition the cost of the doctors' services and court costs made his bill $27.25. Mr. Haffner who was the chauffeur of the car said he could not find his car keys when he was ordered to drive to Mokena by the officers and Deputy Frisch accused him of trying to stall. Mr. Haffner denied all the charges against him and drew a fine of $15.00 which with the costs made his bill $24.25. Kazma and Filch did not have much to say and were let off with a fine of $5.00 which with the costs made their bills $14.25 each.

Deputy Frisch said that a jug of moonshine was found on the grounds and demanded an explanation where it came from, but none of the defendants would say and disclaimed all knowledge of its presence. Justice Schultz ruled that the defendants could not be forced to make any statements that would incriminate them.

After the testimony had been heard and the fines and costs assessed Justice Schultz asked the defendants if they had any money and when they said they did not, he ordered Deputy Frisch to lock them up which he did.

Immediately thereafter James Homerkins appeared and offered to pay the fines and costs of Haffner which Justice Schultz accepted and Haffner was released. The other 3 defendants were locked up until when Kozma and Filch were released when their fines were paid. Baros was kept in jail until Monday morning when Howard Beagley of Mokena went his bonds and he was released.

The defendants were given a reprimand by the court and Deputy Frisch who stated that they should never entertain an idea that they could come out to Mokena and create a disturbance and get away with it. Deputy Frisch said he was ready to meet them at any time they were looking for a scrap. It is hoped that this will be a lesson to the smart alecks from out of town who think they can come to a small town to create trouble and show off their smartness.

Mrs. Philip Knater of Frankfort Dies of Apoplexy

Mrs. Philip Knater, aged 60 years, died suddenly at her home in Frankfort Sunday evening at 8:30 o'clock following a stroke of apoplexy.

Mrs. Knater had been to the Evangelical church services in the morning and had been out for an auto ride in the afternoon. Mr. Knater being tired, retired about 7 o'clock. Mrs. Knater played the piano for awhile and then also retired. She complained of feeling very ill and got up but laid down again. She then complained of feeling worse. Mr. Knater called for Dr. Hedges, but upon his arrival Mrs. Knater was dead.

The deceased was born in Mokena in 1864, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Weber. She was united in marriage with Philip Knater. To this union one daughter was born who died in 1898. The deceased is survived by her husband, two sisters, Mrs. Conrad Sippel of Frankfort and Mrs. Ferdinand Scheer of Chicago besides many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon from the late home to the St. Peter Evangelical church with burial in Pleasant Hill cemetery, Rev. G. Lambrecht officiating.

OFFERED FIVE YEARS FROM STOMACH TROUBLE

Rochester Man Says Tanlac Brought Relief.

"What it takes to give a man muscle and strength to stand hard work, Tanlac certainly has it," recently affirmed Samuel Cooper, a well-known blacksmith, 1520 Lake Ave., Rochester, N. Y.

"Stomach trouble had caused me misery for five years. After meals especially I would almost double up with pain. I was also subject to bad dizzy spells and headaches that would hang on for days at a time. Nervousness and loss of sleep helped to drag me down and I felt tired out all the time.

"I have taken three bottles of Tanlac now and am feeling like a brand new man. In fact, my health is fine and I can say that Tanlac certainly does the work."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Tree Resembles Map

Trees sometimes assume very grotesque shapes and one can trace in their branches the outlines of animals or birds, says London Tit-Bits.

Occasionally, too, the monarchs of the forest may resemble the giants and monsters of legendary lore. But not often do they grow in such a way as to give the idea of a geographical formation.

Such a tree, however, can be seen growing in "The Lady of the Lake" district of Scotland. Its short and long limbs give a distinct impression of the map of England.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best—Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents. Also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Dr. Frederick R. Green, Editor of "Health."

BOILS

AN OLD college friend of mine came to see me one day. He had been having a succession of boils on his back. As soon as one healed another appeared. He took sarsaparilla to "cool the blood," but the boils kept on coming. When I told him to boil his undershirts he looked at me in amazement.

A boil is an infection of a hair follicle or sweat gland. The pus germ, getting into the deeper layers of the skin, causes a small abscess. The skin becomes tender, hard, swollen and red. The center breaks down and forms a core. The boil "breaks," the matter oozes out, the core comes out and the hole slowly heals. Every drop of pus contains germs which infect the surrounding skin, causing a new boil. This may go on indefinitely, causing a "crop" of boils. As long as the skin remains infected, new boils will result. If the clothing next to the skin becomes contaminated, the germs will re-infect the skin, producing new boils.

Contrary to popular belief, boils are not due to "impure blood." In a few diseases, such as diabetes, where the natural resistance of the body is lowered, boils may be due to the general condition. But in any case the infection comes from without and not from within the body.

Most people have great faith in poultices. They may be flaxseed, bread and milk, tobacco, or anything the patient believes will "draw." They are supposed to "draw the poison out" very much like a suction pump. I have seen supposedly intelligent men with a scrap of cold buttered bread spread on a dirty rag and tied on their necks, which they gravely told me was "drawing out the boil." This is nonsense. Poultices don't "draw" anything. Whatever value poultices have is due to their heat and moisture, which favor the growth of the pus germs and so hurry up the "ripening" of the boil.

If you find that a boil is beginning to develop, wash the skin with hot water and soap thoroughly but gently, so as not to break the skin. Dry the skin and paint it with iodine for a space around the boil about the size of a silver dollar. This may stop the boil entirely, if done early enough. If you must have a poultice, use surgical gauze or clean soft rags, such as old handkerchiefs, wrung out of a hot solution of boracic acid, changed as soon as they get cool.

When the boil becomes soft in the center it should be opened by the doctor. A deep cross-shaped incision opens the abscess and relieves the pain. Then keep a soft, clean, dry dressing on the boil, changed often enough to absorb the discharge. Don't try to open the boil yourself with a rusty needle or a dirty jackknife. Don't let the matter soil the clothing or run over the surrounding skin. Clean the skin around the boil with alcohol when the dressing is changed.

TAKING THE CURE AT HOME

ABOUT five years ago, a young man came into my office with the worst case of fright I have ever seen. He said he was a steno-typist, and had always been strong and healthy until recently. For three or four months he had had a persistent cough. For several weeks he had had cold sweats at night. He felt weak and had lost considerable weight. That morning he had coughed up some blood. Careful examination showed that he had a plainly marked but not very far advanced case of tuberculosis of the lungs; what our grandfathers called consumption. When he learned the truth he went all to pieces. He said: "My God, Doctor, what shall I do? I can't quit work; I can't go to California or even to a sanitarium. What am I going to do?"

He was married and had two young children. He had bought a lot on the edge of town and had built a little house, which he was paying for in installments. As long as he could work, he could take care of his family.

He was willing to do anything that he could do. Here is what he did. He took the windows out of his shop and left it wide open. Summer and winter, rainy and sunny days alike he worked at the same temperature as the outside air. I went into his shop one stormy day in February and found him in heavy trousers, sweater and gloves, busy and happy, although the temperature in the room was below freezing. As soon as he got home at night he laid down on a bench on the porch and rested until suppertime. He went to bed at eight o'clock, with all the windows in his bedroom wide open. He slept nine hours every night. He lived on a simple but nourishing diet of eggs, green vegetables, meat and fruit. He drank a quart of milk every day. He took no medicine of any kind.

At the end of a year he was practically well. Careful examination showed only a trace of disease. By this time he liked his new way of living so well that he kept it up from choice. He was now strong enough to work in his garden mornings and evenings. In another year all trace of disease was gone.

HOOVER FOR RADIO RELAY

Urges Interconnection of Stations to Broadcast Important Events.

Washington. — Secretary Hoover urged interconnection of broadcasting stations as a daily routine in his third national radio conference under the auspices of the Department of Commerce. He declared that local stations in every section of the country should be able to handle every important event of national significance as a regular proposition.

He touched on a number of problems which are expected to be brought up at the conference, including the question of wave lengths, power of broadcasting stations, and the general development of broadcasting and marine service.

"We require a still further advance in the character of material beyond the capacity of local station directors, if the art is to emerge entirely from the curio and entertainment stage to that of fundamental service," said Secretary Hoover.

"Experimental broadcasting upon a national scale during the last year has now brought us to the stage where we know it can be done. The local material available for the local program is not, in my view, enough to maintain assured interest, and therefore the industry, or to adequately fulfill the broadcasting mission. So far as they are developed, I think we all agree that for accuracy and regularity of reception we can depend only on the local broadcasting stations."

"My proposition is that the local stations must be able to deliver every important national event with regularity. The local station must be able to bring to its listeners the greatest music and entertainment of the nation, but far beyond this, it must be able to deliver important pronouncements of public men, it must bring instantly to our people a hundred and one matters of national interest."

"To this it must add its matters of local interest. This can only be accomplished by regularly organized interconnection on a national basis with nationally organized and directed programs for some part of the day in supplement to more local material."

"Practical Idealism" of Red Cross Is Praised

Washington.—"Practical humanity and inspired charity" have marked the accomplishments of the American Red Cross, President Coolidge said in an address at the first session of the society's annual meeting here. The President voiced the hope for "a truly civilized world where the cost of armament, of pensions and of fortifications" should be a thing of the past and "where resources shall be used to promote, not to destroy happiness." Such a world could accomplish "mighty works under the leadership of the Red Cross spirit," Mr. Coolidge said.

The "practical idealism" of the Red Cross was emphasized by the President, who recounted its recent accomplishments, especially those having to do with the Japanese earthquake. The nation has, in the Red Cross, an opportunity "to capitalize and direct the finest, the most appealing attribute of our humanity—nature—charity." It shows the way "to a more complete realization of truth and justice through mercy."

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"A Blessing to Suffering Women," Writes One

Louisville, Illinois.—"I certainly thank you for the great benefit I have received from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I first learned about it from my step-mother who got so much help from it. Several years ago I took it for inward weakness and since then I have taken it during the Change of Life and it has been a great help to me. It certainly is a blessing to suffering women and I take pleasure in recommending it. My health has been better this summer than it has been for five years. I am now able to do all my work and have earned 340 quarts of fruit and vegetables this summer."—Mrs. KATE McPEAK, Louisville, Illinois.

Wants Letter Used As Proof

Frankford, Pennsylvania.—"I am sure if women who suffer through the Change of Life as I have, with hot flashes, nervousness and other weaknesses, would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial they would be benefited as I was. My nerves were so bad that every little noise made me jump, but now I am not bothered that way at all. My husband says he really hated to look at me I looked so miserable. I hope you will use this letter as proof of the help the Vegetable Compound is giving me."—Mrs. ABBIE HARVEY, 5701 Leonard St., Frankford, Pa.

Forced To Remain in Bed

Carlisle, Illinois.—"During the Change of Life I suffered with severe nervousness and with disturbances of the entire system. These continued probably two years before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I could do none of my work and was not always able to be up. For ten days at a time I was forced to remain in bed with my hips propped higher than my head and the pains were terrible. The doctor helped some but each time I was forced to go over the same suffering. I had taken the Vegetable Compound in 1910 after my twins were born and it had helped me so I decided to try it again. I became better and gained in strength. I have taken it for about three years now but not steadily. I am able to do my housework but I avoid all heavy lifting and washing and ironing as I know I am not strong enough yet. I give the Vegetable Compound to my daughters and recommend it to my friends."—Mrs. LOUISA B. BRAND, 459 Fairfax Street, Carlisle, Illinois.

In a recent country-wide canvass of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported they had been benefited by its use. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Millis Knickerbocker Passes 92nd Milestone

Millis Knickerbocker, Mokena's oldest resident, passed his 92nd birthday anniversary Saturday. Despite these many years Mr. Knickerbocker is remarkably active and well and his faculties are as keen as those of a much younger person. He says he does not feel old and he does not show his age either. In fact he is a very remarkable old gentleman. He has a wonderful memory and can recall many interesting incidents of the early days of this county. He is the only living civil war veteran in this section. He was born Oct. 4, 1832 at Kinderhook, Columbia County, New York, the home of President Van Buren whom Mr. Knickerbocker's father knew well.

Mr. Knickerbocker did not celebrate his 92nd milestone. He is a typical Yankee and comes of a sturdy race. He also has the distinction of operating the first rural telephone exchange in the United States when the first rural office was opened at New Lenox in 1900 with him in charge as manager.

FRANKFORT

A Mission Festival was held in St. Peter's Evangelical church last Sunday which was beautifully decorated by the Ladies Aid with fruit and flowers.

Rev. G. Lambrecht preached the morning sermon in the German language and the choir sang two selections. Rev. Blasberg who was to have assisted in this service was prevented from doing so on account of illness.

At the afternoon service Rev. Wm. Kreis of Mokena preached in German and Rev. Leonhardt, a missionary of Chicago, told in the English language of his work in the Chicago hospitals and sanitariums.

His talk was very interesting and showed what the missionaries were doing for the sick and helpless. The choir sang two songs at this service also.

In the evening English services were held. Rev. Giese of Mokena giving the main address and Rev. Leonhardt also telling more of his work and experiences. Mrs. Harry Best and Mrs. Henry Breidert sang a beautiful duet and the choir sang also. The total collection for the day amounted to $106.00.

Sunday was a very busy day for automobiles on 11th street and at least one driver will have more respect for the rights of others when driving on a crowded thoroughfare.

It all happened thus: Cars from the west were stopped at the Wash crossing on account of a train passing. One car went around and wanted to get in ahead and thereby crowding another car almost in the ditch who later reciprocated in like manner by stopping the other car near 56th Ave. The question was settled with coats off and bare knuckles. Queensberry rules resulted in a defeat for the first of fender after a thirty minute clean fight.

You never can tell what a Ford is going to do. Break your arm or run over you. This fact can be testified to by Harold Terrill.

In attempting to start his Ford with the rear wheel jacked up, the engine started and jarred off the jack and started after him. He finally managed to dodge it as it ran across 11th street, through the fence into Bishop's yard and tried to climb a tree before stopping.

The Feminine Touches

The elderly and wealthy bachelor, always the possessor of a home known to his friends to be the height of comfort and tasteful decorations, boasted for years that he would never marry—but finally capitulated. A short while later, he was entertaining an old friend at his home. "Look here," he said, pointing to a sewing basket and two or three strands of thread on the carpet, "these are the things that make life worth living. And this," he said, drawing a needle from the arm of an over-stuffed chair, "is what impresses one with the truth of this, that it is the little feminine touches that count."

No More Diving Suits?

The invention by the Japanese of a diving appliance which dispenses with the use of pumping promises to revolutionize the pearling industry.

The new appliance consists of a small mask, with face glass and rubber edge, which covers the eyes and nose. The mask is connected to a cylinder about sixteen pounds in weight, filled with compressed air, which is carried on the chest.

The supply of air to the nose is regulated by the mouth.

An attachment to a tube connecting the cylinder with the mask.

The old cumbersome diving suit is thus dispensed with, and the diver, with the greater freedom allowed to his limbs, can work more expeditiously.

LORD GEORGE

SYNOPSIS.—Thrown from his auto in a New York village, a man is carried unconscious into the home of a Miss Edith Grant. A doctor discovers he has been shot, fatally. Consciousness returning, he babbles of "millions." He begs that Henry Archman, millionaire resident of the city, be sent for, declaring he has important papers for him. Archman cannot be reached by phone, but word is sent that his secretary is on the way. A man announcing himself as Archman's secretary, Akin, arrives, talks with Morbach, and leaves with a package he gives him. Morbach dies. Archman's arrival, with his secretary, reveals that the man posing as Akin is an impostor. Archman denounces Edith Grant as a girl endeavoring to snare his son Harry. Archman, it appears, has millions made in Chicago, has yielded to the importunities of his family—his wife, daughters Nellie and Bessie (seventeen years old), and son Harry—and moved to New York in an endeavor to gain recognition by the Four Hundred. They have not succeeded. Mrs. Archman is bitter over her failure, particularly mourning the fact that she has not been "taken up" by a Mrs. Van Kull. Archman orders Nellie to get ready for a long journey with him. He refuses to reveal their destination to his wife, declaring it is "not his secret." Nellie tells Bess she is in love with James Carr, a youth working on Archman's ship, El Rio. She gives Bess a message for him. Archman and Nellie depart. Harry tells Bess of his determination to marry Edith Grant. Mrs. Archman receives a map, with the explanation that it was among Morbach's papers, and suggesting she forward it to Mr. Archman. Lord George Caruthers, traveling Englishman, arrives at the Archman home, by invitation.

CHAPTER V

A Message Received.

Three days after Archman's abrupt departure with Nellie, Mrs. Archman and Bess were sitting at the breakfast table. The murder of Morbach had created a sensation. Reporters in droves had descended upon the Archman home and, failing to obtain interviews with any of the family, had built towering fabrics of surmise on the unaccountable fact that Mr. Archman and Nellie had left the country abruptly. Immediately after coming from the scene of the crime, the inquest followed and the three Archmans, and Akin as well, had been obliged to appear and testify. None of them could give any information as to the murder itself, but Mrs. Archman had been compelled to admit that the sudden departure of Mr. Archman and Nellie had been due to it. Her assertion that she did not know the whereabouts of the situation, nor even the place for which her daughter and husband had set out, naturally added to the interest of the case. The coroner, urged on by the newspapers, went beyond all reasonable bounds in his questionings, and drove Mrs. Archman to the verge of collapse.

He was much more merciful in his examination of Miss Grant; that young lady being an actress, the papers were much less desirous of advertising her. Nothing as to her relations to Harry Archman came out. Henry Harrison, who had played so important a part in the events of the evening, had disappeared utterly; perhaps—so said the papers—merely to avoid annoyance and perhaps for some more significant reason. The pretended secretary had also disappeared, leaving no trace.

Aside from these annoyances, each of the three Archmans had much to worry them. Mrs. Archman had heard nothing from Nellie and had received only one brief note from her husband, and that one, dated at New York, merely declared that he had seen Captain Bunker and had given him his orders, and that he and Nellie were about to leave town and he would not write again, "to avoid giving information of his movements to possible spies."

The intimation that he might be watched and followed was naturally not comforting, and Mrs. Archman was very glad that the letter came after the conclusion of the inquest, so that she had not been compelled to mention it to the coroner. Moreover, she was worrying over both Bess and Harry. With Nellie's departure the girl's remark about "splendid Americans who made their way by their own efforts" would naturally have ceased to trouble her. Unfortunately for her peace of mind, however, Bess took it up and echoed it constantly, with the vague intention of smoothing Nellie's way in case of necessity, until Mrs. Archman began to believe that it was Bess and not Nellie who had fallen in love with a poor man.

Then, too, she had sounded Harry about his inamorata, and had received evasive replies that added to her alarm. Her whole world was crashing around her.

Bess, too, had her troubles. Her promise to Nellie to visit the El Rio and see Carr had seemed simple enough when she made it, but had so far turned out to be beyond her power to keep. The rush of reporters and detectives and the suspense of the inquest had taken up every available moment. Even when this was over Mrs. Archman had thrown up her hands in amazement when Bess proposed a visit to the ship. "Good heavens! What are you thinking of, Bess?" she cried. "Haven't you seen the El Rio enough to last you for a while?"

Bess hesitated. "I want to see if Captain Bunker can tell us anything about father," she said, uncertainly.

"Well"—Mrs. Archman considered—"we'll go as soon as all this excitement is over."

Harry Archman, like his mother and sister, was uneasy and apparently bewildered. Whether this was because he had taken his father's warning to heart or because of some other cause, did not appear.

Certainly all three were gloomy enough—so gloomy that Bess was moved to protest. "Gracious!" she cried. "Cheer up. The worst is yet to come! We aren't all dead yet. Cheer up, or I'll begin to cry, too! Cheer up!" She looked at her mother.

Mrs. Archman dabbed at her eyes. "I can't!" she burst out, and rushed from the room.

Bess looked after her with a sigh. Then she looked at Harry. "Poor mummy!" she murmured. "It's tough. She can't get into society. Lord George won't visit us now. Dad and Nellie have gone away, nobody knows where. And you—say, young man, you'd better own up. I know you've done something awful. Mother said 'sssh' when I asked her what it is. What is it? 'Fess up!'"

Harry glared at her. "Don't be rotten, Bess!" he begged. "I'm in a hole."

Bess softened instantly. She was very fond of Harry. "What's the matter, old boy?" she asked. "What's wrong? Tell Little Sunshine."

"Everything's wrong—awfully wrong. And the worst of it is I don't know just what is wrong. I know some of it, of course, but—"

"Well?"

"You know Edith Grant?"

"Edith Grant! Of course I know her. I've not been deprived of my ears during the last few days, have I? Of course I know her. But I don't know her."

"Well, I do! I've known her six months. And I'm going to marry her."

Bess' eyes widened. "But Harry—"

"Yes; I know," the boy broke in. "For goodness' sake, don't start to preaching. I've heard all the preaching I can stand, from father and from mother. Edith is just as good as gold, and I am going to marry her, I don't care what anybody says."

"Good gracious! First Nellie, and now you—"

Harry did not notice the reference to his sister. "Yes, I'm going to marry her," he reiterated. "I've been engaged to her for a month. I've been trying to break the news to father and mother, but I haven't dared, and that sneak Akin has been spying and telling tales, and, oh, it's rotten!"

"But, Harry! You must tell mother at once."

"How the dickens can I?" demanded the boy. "I might have told father when he brought up the subject the other night, but he wouldn't listen, and then that man Morbach had to get murdered and to die at Edith's house, and father lit out and—oh! It's the devil and all!"

Bess nodded. "It sure is," she agreed.

"It was mere chance that Morbach was taken to Edith's house. You know that. He had been shot long before and the accident with the machine took place just in front of her door, and of course she had them bring him in. And when dad found out that she was the girl he had just been reading the riot act to me about, he made up his mind that she was part of the conspiracy to steal the papers. And I can't get him now to try to set things right."

"But why don't you tell mother?"

The boy groaned. "I don't dare. Mother is good, but she's crazy about getting into society and she wants me to marry into it, and now Akin has poisoned her mind, too, and—oh!—it wouldn't be any use. Of course, I want Edith to marry me right away, but father threatens to take my job away if I do, and if he does that we wouldn't have anything to live on. If father and mother could meet Edith, they'd like her and everything would be all right."

Bess nodded. "Maybe it would," she acceded. "Something's got to be done, of course. I'll try to think up something."

"All right," Harry jumped up. "You're the best sister that ever was, and I'm sure you'll find a way to help us. Hello, mother!"

Mrs. Archman had come into the room. Her eyes were bright and her cheeks flushed.

"Good heavens!" she exclaimed. "See what I have found in my mail. It was typewritten and I thought at first it was a bill or something. But it isn't. Listen!"

"Dear Mrs. Archman: I inclose a document that I intercepted on its way to your husband the other night. I thought it was something different. I have no use for it, and as Mr. Morbach said it was of great importance, I return it herewith, with the suggestion that you get it to Mr. Archman at the earliest possible moment, by absolutely safe hands."

"There's no signature," said Mrs. Archman. "Now look at the inclosure." She spread a sheet of muddy, blood-stained paper on the table. It was the map of an island, drawn in black, with a dotted red line running up and half-way around it.

Bess stared at it. "It's a map of an island, all right," she said. "But what island? Where is it?"

"I don't know," Mrs. Archman snatched up the paper. "There's no name on it."

"And no longitude nor latitude, either," remarked Harry. "It might be anywhere. I guess father knows. But where is father?"

"Where is he?" Bess laughed scornfully. "I'll bet I know where he is. He's on the way to this island. That's where Captain Bunker is to meet him. Give the captain the map and he'll give it to father."

"Maybe," Mrs. Archman's wits were not quite so rapid as those of her children. "I'll go in and see Captain Bunker right away."

"We'll all go!" Bess made the declaration, instantly and enthusiastically.

Harry nodded assent, and Mrs. Archman agreed excitedly. Before any of them could make a move to start, however, a footman came in with a card.

Mrs. Archman took it. "Lord George Caruthers," she read blankly. "He's come, in spite of all this turmoil."

"Come!" Bess laughed. "Of course, he's come," she exclaimed. "You couldn't keep him away!"

"Well—somebody's got to stay with him."

"Stay with him! Nonsense! Take him along!" Bess laughed excitedly. "Come, let's meet him and ask him. Good gracious! I feel as if I were living in a play!"

CHAPTER VI

Bound South.

Lord George turned out to be a blue-eyed, ruddy-skinned, Roman-nosed, droopy-mustached Englishman perhaps thirty years of age, who said, "Oh, I say!" exactly as an Englishman should. Though perhaps a little astonished for the moment, he seemed to be delighted to visit the El Rio. "Oh, I say!" he exclaimed, when Bess put the question to him. "That's perfectly jolly now, don't you know?" When, on the way down to the city, Bess explained the circumstances, or as much of them as she understood, he seemed more and more delighted. "Fancy now!" he said. "It's mighty exciting—what?"

Bess agreed with him enthusiastically. "Isn't it?" she cried. "Here's the devoted subhero racing to bring the dread tidings to the hero—dad's the hero, of course—and he's murdered on the way and robbed of his blood-bought dispatches. The hero guesses what's in them and races off to what he thinks is the rendezvous, leaving his faithful vassals to follow. Then the thief repents—or does he repent? I reckon he's plotting something, though I don't know what it is. What do you think, Lord George?"

"Really, I can't guess. What could he be plotting, now, Miss Archman?"

"I'm just trying to find out. You see, there's nothing to tell where the island is or what there is on it. We're just guessing what father may know. Maybe—maybe the thief figures that father has gone there and that we will lead him to it somehow."

"You'll have to be jolly careful, won't you? What?" Lord George spoke as if he were interested. His eyes never left Bess' vivacious face.

Mrs. Archman noticed his interest and smiled at Bess so warmly that that young woman, after a moment's stare of incomprehension, giggled outright. "Not this time, mother," she said aloud, impatiently, trusting to boldness to protect her. "I decline to be a meal ticket." Then she spun on their guest. "Mother is greatly interested in charity work, Lord George," she explained. "She is a member of a society that provides meal tickets for the impecunious."

Lord George looked bewildered, as well he might. "Ah, yes! Quite so!" he said blankly.

Either the thief has a conscience—or else he is using the family to find the father. What's your guess?

Lesson for October 12

THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

LESSON TEXT—Matt. 6:5-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.—Matt. 6:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Prayer That Jesus Taught.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Lord's Prayer.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Principles of Christian Living.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Sermon on the Mount in Daily Living.

The so-called Sermon on the Mount is not indeed a sermon but a proclamation of the principles and laws which shall obtain in Christ's Kingdom when it shall be established on the earth. In applying the teachings of Matthew 5-7 two errors should be avoided, namely, that of the legalist who makes these principles the hard and fast standard of life for the believer today and also that of the one who denies that the principles or laws of the Kingdom are binding upon believers. Believers have practically the same relation to the Sermon on the Mount that they have to the Ten Commandments. While free from their demands as law, they find delight in retaining them as expressions of God's holy law and thus rejoice in the consciousness that Christ has met all the requirements thereof and that their standing before God is in Him.

I. False Prayer (vv. 5-7).

1. This consists in one praying to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). To go through the act of praying with such an object is to play the hypocrite. Many of the prayers uttered in the public sanctuary are false, for there is more consideration of what the people think than of what God thinks. In prayer the soul is dealing with God. Therefore, engaging in it to attract men's attention is blasphemous. Men who thus pray get a reward, but not from God. They pray to get notice from men and they get such notice.

2. Vain Repetition (vv. 7, 8). This does not mean that we should ask but once for the thing desired, for we have examples of Christ and Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 26:39-24; II Cor. 12:7, 8), but rather it means the use of meaningless repetitions, the meaningless reiterations of empty sounds. To pray thus is heathenish. The heathen nations in their worship of idols engage in senseless babble, which we see in the priests of Baal on Mt. Carmel (I Kings 18:26).

II. True Prayer (v. 6).

Since true prayer is a definite transaction of the soul with God, the communion of the human personality with the divine personality, we should have a real desire for fellowship with God and then go and meet Him in secret.

Life for its fullest development needs both solitude and companionship. Solitude alone makes one morose, while constant companionship makes one shallow. God who made us knew what our natures required. Therefore, He commands both public and private prayer (Heb. 10:25; Matt. 6:6).

III. The Model Prayer (vv. 9-13).

This was given in response to the disciples' request that the Lord would teach them how to pray. It is not, therefore, the Lord's prayer, but the model prayer for the disciples which involves:

1. A Right Relationship (v. 9). "Our Father." Only those who have become children of God by faith in Jesus Christ (Gal. 3:26) can pray aright. One must be a child of God before he can be in communion with God.

2. A Right Attitude (vv. 9, 10). "Hallowed be Thy name." When one realizes that he has been delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the Kingdom of His dear Son (Col. 1:13) by being made a child of God, he cannot help pouring out his soul in gratitude and praise, intensely longing for the kingdom, the righteous rule of Christ on the earth.

3. A Right Spirit (vv. 11-13).

(1) That of trust which looks to God for the supply of daily bread. We are dependent upon Him for our daily food.

(2) That of love which results in forgiveness of others. God will not listen to the prayers of one who has an unforgiving spirit.

(3) That of holiness which moves one to pray not to be led into temptation and longs to be delivered from the evil one.

Believe

We are not to keep on looking out for the kingdom of God, but to believe firmly that it is come, and to live and act in that knowledge and assurance. Then will it indeed be come for us.—Hare.

The Question

The question is not "How much of God do I have?" but, "How much of me does God have?" Am I wholly yielded?—Gospel Minister.

Berlin Has Most Papers

According to newspaper data recently compiled in Vienna there are some 1,800 so-called political dailies and weeklies published in central Europe. Berlin, with about 100, half of which are dailies, leads the list of cities, with Vienna in second place with 55, including 22 dailies. Prague, however, ranks next to Berlin in the matter of dailies, having 25, says the New York Times. In Prague there is a daily newspaper for every 33,000 inhabitants, in Rome and Budapest one for every 70,000, in Paris one for every 75,000 and in Vienna one for every 85,000. The word political is used to distinguish ordinary newspapers from technical organs and literary publications.

Frankfort Couple Surprised on Their Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. August Werner, old time residents of Frankfort have been united in marriage for half a century and recently they celebrated their golden anniversary at a surprise party given in their honor at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Charles Harmening of Frankfort.

The Harmening home was beautifully decorated in gold, green and white for the occasion, and a large table, extending thru the dining room and living room, seating for 46 persons, was utilized for the anniversary dinner.

Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Mrs. Glenn Folkers and the Rev. G. Lambrecht made a short address. Two songs were then sung, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" and "Take Thou My Hands and Lead Me."

A huge wedding cake, trimmed with gold and white ornaments and tied with two gold band rings, decorated the anniversary table, at which more than 300 guests were served.

Following the dinner the party was adjourned to Frankfort hall, where the evening was spent in music, dancing and games. Midnight supper was served in the hall and Mr. and Mrs. Werner were presented with $50 in gold and numerous other presents.

Mr. Werner is 71 years old and his wife 69 years of age. In 1874 Mr. Werner was married to the then Miss Fredricka Dralle of Monee, in Monee, the Rev. Seneger officiating.

Following the marriage the couple made their home in Frankfort and has resided there since that time. Three children were born of the marriage, two sons and a daughter. One son died, but the remaining children, Albert Werner of Chicago Heights and Mrs. Harmening were in attendance at the surprise party. The couple has one grandchild, Isabella Harmening.

Orland Couple Married 50 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Con Helenhouse, well known residents of Orland have traveled the path of life together for a half century and in commemoration of this event a golden wedding celebration was held at Raney's hall on Oct. 2nd.

The honored couple have been in fair health for the past few years. Mr. Helenhouse was born near Chicago on June 14, 1852. Mrs. Helenhouse was born on Sept. 14, 1855 in DuPage County and moved with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Murfitt when she was 8 months old to the farm one half mile east of Orland. When she 19 years old she was united in marriage with Con Helenhouse on Oct. 3,

America's Most Lawless Nation In the World

"America is the most lawless nation in the world" so stated Rev. A.R. Mangus, pastor of the Mokena M. E. church in a sermon last Sunday night when he gave the above quotation from Judge Tally of New York City. Rev. Mangus showed that 10,000 persons were murdered in the United States during 1923. He also showed how the laws of the nation are disregarded and treated with impunity while the public is looking on with apparent indifference viewing the whole situation as tho it were only an account in a newspaper of some passing scandal.

Rev. Mangus showed that the trouble with America today is, that the parents are not instilling in the lives of their children respect for the laws of the land and that the parents are obeying the children instead of the latter obeying the parents.

Obedience in the home is not exercised as in the days of old, so when the children of to-day grow up to be the citizens of tomorrow it is small wonder that they will not obey the laws of the land, for they never learned the meaning of obedience in the home.

Rev. Mangus further showed that the home is the foundation of the nation and that he only manner in which America can be made God fearing and law abiding nation is for the parents to so instruct their children that they will learn to be God fearing and obedient at home so when they become the men and women of tomorrow they will do their part to wipe out the stain that rests on this nation to-day. At the rate we are going now it will be necessary to send missionaries to work among our own people instead of sending them to the foreign fields. We will be a reproach to all nations if our present gait of lawlessness is tolerated for any length of time.

Rev. Mangus further pointed out that there are only two things that can prevent the utter breaking down of law and order and these 1874 at Summit, Ill., by Rev. Murphy.

Surrounded by their family of three daughters and one son, three grandchildren and other relatives and friends. The honored couple heartily joined in the celebration. The bride and groom of fifty years wore golden bouquets. The bride and groom were remarried by Mr. A. Robson of Palos Park after which a bounteous supper was served at eight o'clock to about 135 guests.

The table decorations were of golden colors. A large golden wedding cake graced the center of the table and was served to the guests at midnight. The evening was spent in dancing and social visiting. Mr. and Mrs. Helenhouse received very many gifts of gold.

Maywood Air Mail Field Lighted by This Company

No. 19 in a series of statements about the Company's business

ONE of the most complete installations for guidance of mail service night pilots is now in use at the Maywood air mail field.

Public Service Company engineers co-operated with government engineers in designing and installing the illumination of this field, the most spectacular feature of which is the 36 inch flood light mounted on one of the main hangars.

This beacon light throws a beam of 6,000,000 candle power into the night sky and provides a path of light visible to aviators for 175 miles.

Approaching pilots are guided to Maywood field by this tremendously high power beacon. They are further directed to safe landings by ground lights and red mushroom markers indicating the cinder runways. There is also an illuminated weather vane to give them wind direction.

This Company provides the electricity for all of this illumination and also for the 400,000 candle power guide light installed at Harvey.

Public Service Company is glad to be able to assist the United States Government in lessening the hazards of the air and to lend its aid in making the facilities of the transcontinental air mail service more efficient.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY OF NORTHERN ILLINOIS

Serving 6,000 square miles—202 cities and towns—with Gas or Electricity

L. C. STEPHEN, DIST. MANAGER,

310 Van Buren St. Joliet, Illinois. Telephone 636.

The announcement that the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois has been awarded the Charles A. Coffin Medal for 1923, is a tribute to the territory in which this Company operates as well as to the service it renders.

This award was made to this Company in competition with the electric light and power companies of the United States for distinguished contribution to the development of electric light and power for the convenience of the public and the benefit of the industry.

The Letter Way—and the Better Way

DURING 1924 we will be required by public demand for service to add 65,000 telephones to our system. Switchboards, cable, wires, poles, instruments and other equipment for these telephones must be bought and put into service at higher levels for material and labor than the existing plant. Capital for this purpose must be obtained, on which an adequate return must be paid.

ILLINOIS BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY
BELL SYSTEM
One Policy • One System • Universal Service

THE letter way was a good way when it was the only way. But the art of letter writing has been lost in the rush of modern business life.

The telephone way—a better way, a more personal way—has taken its place.

More and more, Long Distance is doing the work of the postman, and the social and business letters of other decades are being replaced by the social and business telephone calls of to-day.
